Improving Business Environment to Attract FDI to America

Nana Kwame Bediako

Azad Cola

Abstract

Partnering with a second generation developer and a famously successful British entrepreneur Azad Cola, Nana Kwame Bediako as a founding partner of Kensington Residential Partners is set to encourage the boom in economic and social activity in Ghana that is led by on-going discoveries of natural riches of the country. The idea of building the corporate hospitality hub in Accra was born out of their inspiration to help Africa realize its full potential by capitalizing on its natural resources. They conceptualized a "home-away-from-home" hospitality residential complex designed to provide a spacious and flexible hospitality environment with state-of-the-art infrastructure to facilitate and encourage so-much-needed business travel to Ghana and Africa in general.

Biography

With a vision to transform Africa and a proven track record of success, Nana Kwame Bediako stands out among the brightest rising entrepreneurs in Africa. In only a few short years, Nana Kwame has achieved an impressive level of success in Accra's real estate industry with properties in prime areas including Trasacco Valley, Cantonments, Airport, and East Legon. Now he has his sights set on tackling national, regional, and continental development issues. Nana Kwame Bediako is also the founder of New Africa Construction (NAC) as well as The New Africa Foundation, a non-profit organization aimed at empowering a new generation of African Leaders.
